

Want to decrease loneliness for people with dementia?

If you

- Are 65 or older and have mild to moderate dementia (that is, worsening memory problems)

OR

- Are 21 or older and are a friend or relative to someone who has dementia

AND if you:

- Live in your own home, a family-member's home or in an assisted living setting
- Speak and understand English

You may be eligible for a research study to provide your opinions about interventions that can be used to decrease loneliness for people with dementia.

Participation is voluntary and takes about 2 hours. If you have dementia, we ask that you find a friend or family member that can bring you to the session.

In appreciation of your time and travel, you will receive a $60 cash incentive.

Please call: (416) 979-5000 ext 2571 for more information.

A telephone pre-screen (~10 minutes) will be done to confirm that you meet the study criteria. If you have dementia, please make sure you have a family or friend available for the researcher to talk to for the pre-screen to confirm some information about you (e.g. your age).

Location: Ryerson University

This study was approved by the Ryerson Research Ethics Board.
